covers very completely the wide field of classical philology, containing works in the several departments of grammar of the Indo-European languages, comparative literature, history of ancient peoples, archaeology, philosophy, history of art, history of literature, geography and chronology. The Greek and Latin poets and prose-writers are abundantly represented by the best of the older complete editions and the more recent special works. The library contains also some of the German periodicals and a collection of between four and five thousand programmes and dissertations in the field of classical philology. In addition, the library is the library of a man who was continuously at work till his death. It was, therefore, constantly increased and contains the most recently published works of interest to the student in the field of study for which it was gathered. HAMILTON FORD ALLEN

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS

Within the last two months classical scholarship in America has suffered two grievous losses, in the death of Professor Minton Warren of Harvard University and that of Professor Thomas D. Seymour of Yale University. Professor Warren died very suddenly, on November 26, 1907; "he fell to the ground without any warning, just as he had turned to walk homeward from the door of the house of a friend". A brief notice of his career may be found in The Classical Journal for January, 1908 (3.118-120).

Professor Seymour died of pneumonia, after a brief illness, in the closing days of the last year.

Both these distinguished scholars had given renewed proof of their ability in 1907, Professor Warren by the publication of the first part of his elaborate discussion of the famous stele under the Lapis Niger in the Forum at Rome, Professor Seymour by the issuance of his elaborate work on Life in the Homeric Age, which has been briefly noticed in The Classical Weekly and will be reviewed at length in a later issue.

Here we read: "Repente lymphati, destrictis gladiis, in centuriones invadunt (ea vetustissima militaribus odiis materies, et saeviendi principium), prostratos verberibus mulcant, sexageni singulos, ut numerum centurionum adaequarent". With a change of punctuation and the addition of one letter where it might easily have been omitted by accident, I propose: Repente lymphati, destrictis gladiis, in centuriones invadunt (ea vetustissima militaribus odiis materies), et, saeviendi principium, prostratos verberibus mulcant, sexagenis singulos, ut numerum centurionum adaequarent.
